CONFUSION STILL IN HOUSE OVER VOTE.

While the Senate was voting, House leaders were working. There was no doubt that the Administration victory in the Senate was expected to solidify the sentiment in the House, and the leaders looked for some favor able developments during the day.

President Wilson, after he had conferred with Acting Chairman Pou of the Rules Committee, determined to have a vote in the House even if a special rule containing a resolution were required to get it. Instatence that a vote be taken by Rules Committee action, if necessary, came after varying reports as to the stand of the Foreign Affairs Committee. As yet no resolution has been agreed upon in the latter committee which would command a majority vote, and there was no positive as surance to-day that any resolution would be reported by it. Chairman Flood expressed the hope that a sat isfactory resolution would be drawn to-day and reported when the com mittee meets this afternoon.

Administration leaders in House were hopeful that it would be unnecessary to report a resolution in rule. It is taken for granted that Republicans would fight such a rule, and, with one exception, such action is unprecedented. Mr. Pou told members of the Rules have always favored firmness in all Committee that he regarded the present situation above partisan politics and for that reason there would be no secret sessions of the Democratic members to arrive at some plan of He wants a non-parttear
